SUMMARY

The goal of this study was to test specific hypotheses illustrating the relationships among serious victimization experiences, the mental health effects of victimization, substance abuse/use, and delinquent behavior in adolescents. The study assessed both familial and nonfamilial types of violence. It was designed as a telephone survey of American youth aged 12-17 living in United States households and residing with a parent or guardian. One parent or guardian in each household was interviewed briefly to establish rapport, secure permission to interview the targeted adolescent, and to ensure the collection of comparative data to examine potential nonresponse bias from households without adolescent participation. All interviews with parents and adolescents were conducted using Computer-Assisted Telephone Interviewing (CATI) technology. From the surveys of parents and adolescents, the principal investigators created one data file by attaching the data from the parents to the records of their respective adolescents. Adolescents were asked whether violence and drug abuse were problems in their schools and communities and what types of violence they had personally witnessed. They were also asked about other stressful events in their lives, such as the loss of a family member, divorce, unemployment, moving to a new home or school, serious illness or injury, and natural disaster. Questions regarding history of sexual assault, physical assault, and harsh physical discipline elicited a description of the event and perpetrator, extent of injuries, age at abuse, whether alcohol or drugs were involved, and who was informed of the incident. Information was also gathered on the delinquent behavior of respondents and their friends, including destruction of property, assault, theft, sexual assault, and gang activity. Other questions covered history of personal and family substance use and mental health indicators, such as major depression, post-traumatic stress disorder, weight changes, sleeping disorders, and problems concentrating. Demographic information was gathered from the adolescents on age, race, gender, number of people living in household, and grade in school. Parents were asked whether they were concerned about violent crime, affordable child care, drug abuse, educational quality, gangs, and the safety of their children at school. In addition, they were questioned about their own victimization experiences and whether they discussed personal safety issues with their children. Parents also supplied demographic information on gender, marital status, number of children, employment status, education, race, and income.

KEY WORDS

delinquent behavior, mental health, substance abuse, victimization

PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

Childhood victimization has been found to be strongly related to substance use/abuse/dependence, delinquent behavior, and a variety of other mental, emotional, and behavioral problems. In the past, studies have either examined victimization by studying family violence and ignored other victimization experiences, or have assessed criminal violence and disregarded violence perpetrated by family members. This study assessed both familial and nonfamilial violence. The goal of the study was to test specific hypotheses generated by a theoretically and empirically constructed conceptual framework that illustrated the relationships among serious victimization experiences, the mental health effects of victimization, substance use/abuse, and delinquent behavior. The research objectives were (1) to provide descriptive information about cases of familial and nonfamilial violent assault, delinquent behavior, mental health problems, and substance use, abuse, and dependence, broken down by age, gender, family income, and racial/ethnic group among American adolescents; (2) to test a risk factor model that hypothesized relationships between violent familial and nonfamilial victimization in childhood and adolescence and risk of post traumatic stress disorder, delinquent behavior, and substance use, abuse, and dependence; and (3) to examine potential differences between gender and ethnic minority groups in the correlates and consequences of substance use/abuse/dependence and delinquent behavior. The primary hypothesis of this study was that victimization during childhood and/or adolescence increased the risk of developing significant psychological distress and substance use, which in turn increased risk for substance abuse or dependence, delinquent behavior, and subsequent victimization.

METHODS

STUDY DESIGN

The study was designed as a telephone survey of American youth between the ages of 12-17 who (1) were living in United States households with telephones, (2) resided with a parent or guardian, and (3) could converse in English or Spanish. All sample selection and interviewing was done by Schulman, Ronca, and Bucuvalas, Inc. (SRBI), a New York-based survey research team. All interviews with both parents and adolescents were conducted using Computer-Assisted Telephone Interviewing (CATI) technology. After determining that the household contained one or more eligible adolescents, interviewers asked to speak to a parent or guardian. One parent or guardian in each household was interviewed briefly to establish rapport, secure permission to interview the targeted adolescent, and to ensure the collection of comparative data to examine potential nonresponse bias from households without adolescent participation. Parents and guardians were provided the opportunity to call a toll-free number to confirm the authenticity of the study. Whenever possible, adolescents were interviewed immediately following the parent or guardian interviews. Otherwise, appointments were scheduled when possible or blind callbacks at different times of the day or days of the week were made. As an incentive for participation, adolescent participants received a certificate of participation in the "National Survey of Adolescents" and a check for five dollars as compensation for their time. From the surveys of parents and adolescents, the principal investigators created one data file by attaching the data from the parents to the records of their respective adolescents.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

Data were collected through telephone interviews with adolescents and their parents or guardians.

SAMPLE

The study consisted of two subsamples, a national probability household sample of 3,161 adolescents and a probability oversample of 862 adolescents residing in central city areas of the United States, for a total sample of 4,023. Because the parent or guardian interviews were conducted prior to the adolescent interviews, the 4,023 participants in the parent sample were also selected from a national probability sample of households and a probability oversample of central city households. To construct the initial national probability sample, a multistage, stratified, area probability, random-digit-dialing sampling procedure that had four steps was used. First, the United States was stratified geographically by Census region and a population-based subsample allocation was developed for each geographic stratum. In other words, the number of households drawn for the sample from each geographic stratum was allocated in proportion to the actual distribution of the population residing within each stratum, according to the most recent Census estimates. In the second step, telephone banks within each geographic stratum were systematically selected utilizing the comprehensive database of working telephone banks maintained by Schulman, Ronca, and Bucuvalas, Inc. (SRBI). Third, random-digit-dialing was used to sample telephone households within the telephone banks selected in the second stage. Nonworking household (e.g., business) numbers were immediately replaced by other numbers selected in the same fashion as the initial numbers. Non-answering numbers were called again four times before being replaced. In the fourth step, an adult respondent in each household was screened to determine if there were any adolescents aged 12-17 currently living in the household or if any had lived in the household at least four months during the previous year. In households with multiple eligible adolescents, a systematic selection (i.e., "most recent birthday" technique) was made to determine which eligible individual would be designated as the respondent. Construction of the central city oversample followed the same procedures except for the initial geographic stratification step. This step was replaced using the census classification of counties by types of place and specifying the target population as households located within these urban counties. Adolescents who were potentially excluded from the study included those residing in institutional settings, in households without a parent or guardian (e.g., emancipated minors, married adolescents living on their own) or in a house without telephones, those who did not speak English or Spanish, and those whose parents did not give permission for them to be interviewed.

RESPONSE RATES

Parents in 90.1 percent of eligible households completed interviews and parents in 78.9 percent of eligible households gave permission for their adolescents to be interviewed. Adolescent interviews were completed in 75 percent of eligible households, 83.2 percent of households with completed parent interviews, and 95 percent of households with parental permission.

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

DESCRIPTION OF VARIABLES

Adolescents were asked whether violence and drug abuse were problems in their schools and communities and what types of violence they had personally witnessed. They were also asked about other stressful events in their lives, such as the loss of a family member, divorce, unemployment, moving to a new home or school, serious illness or injury, and natural disaster. Questions regarding history of sexual assault, physical assault, and harsh physical discipline elicited a description of the event and perpetrator, extent of injuries, age at abuse, whether alcohol or drugs were involved, and who was informed of the incident. Information was also gathered on the delinquent behavior of respondents and their friends, including destruction of property, assault, theft, sexual assault, and gang activity. Other questions covered history of personal and family substance use and mental health indicators, such as major depression, post-traumatic stress disorder, weight changes, sleeping disorders, and problems concentrating. Demographic information was gathered from the adolescents on age, race, gender, number of people living in household, and grade in school. Parents were asked whether they were concerned about violent crime, affordable child care, drug abuse, educational quality, gangs, and the safety of their children at school. In addition, they were questioned about their own victimization experiences and whether they discussed personal safety issues with their children. Parents also supplied demographic information on gender, marital status, number of children, employment status, education, race, and income.

PRESENCE OF COMMON SCALES

Several Likert-type scales were used.

UNIT OF OBSERVATION

Individuals.

EXTENT OF PROCESSING

ICPSR checked for undocumented codes, standardized missing data codes, and reformatted the data. Hardcopy documentation was converted into a PDF file. ICPSR also produced a codebook and SAS and SPSS data definition statements for this collection.

EXTENT OF COLLECTION

This data collection consists of one data file, a user guide, codebook, and data collection instruments in one PDF file, and SAS and SPSS data definition statements.

DATA COLLECTION NOTES

The user guide, codebook, and data collection instruments are provided as a Portable Document Format (PDF) file. The PDF file format was developed by Adobe Systems Incorporated and can be accessed using PDF reader software, such as Adobe Acrobat Reader. Information on how to obtain a copy of the Acrobat Reader is provided through the ICPSR Website on the Internet.

DATA RESOURCES PROGRAM ON THE INTERNET

The National Institute of Justice Data Resources Program (DRP) makes datasets from NIJ-funded research and evaluation projects available to the research community and sponsors research and training activities devoted to secondary data analysis. Datasets are archived by the National Archive of Criminal Justice Data (NACJD) at the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR) at the University of Michigan.

The NACJD maintains a World Wide Web site with instructions for transferring files and sending messages. Criminal justice data funded by the Department of Justice are available via the Internet at this site at no charge to the user. NACJD may be contacted at NACJD/ICPSR, P.O. SCREENER

Hello, I'm _____, with SRBI, the national research organization in New York City. We are conducting the National Survey of Adolescents under a grant from the United States Department of Justice.

I am going to ask you some questions -- about things that happen in your school, in your neighborhood, in your family, and also your opinions -- things you like and don't like. This is part of a national survey of more than 4,000 boys and girls age 12 through 17.

[You were originally chosen completely at random to represent the opinions and experiences of thousands of young people. We did this by dialing random phone numbers until we found someone the right age. You don't have to participate in this interview if you don't want to, but your help will make a big difference.]

The interview will take about a half an hour. I'll be asking you some questions about dangerous situations you may have faced and about some personal situations, where you might have been threatened. You can stop the interview at any time. If this is a bad time to talk, I can call back at a better time for you. To thank you for your help, we will be sending you a check for five dollars.

We would like you to try and answer every question that you can. However, if there is any question that you don't want to answer, that will be OK. Also, if there is any question that you don't understand, please say so. If there are too many people around for you to talk freely, just let me know and I can call back later. We are not going to tell your parents, your school or anyone else anything you told us.

Can we begin now? [IF NO, SCHEDULE CALLBACK]

- 10a. Sometimes a person may do sexual things to a young person that the young person doesn't want. These unwanted sexual things can happen to boys as well as girls and to young men as well as young women. People who try to do unwanted sexual things to young people are not always strangers but can be someone you know well like a neighbor, teacher, coach, counselor, boss, baby-sitter, minister or priest. They can even be a family member. People who try to make young people do unwanted sexual things aren't always men or boys - they can also be women or girls. I am talking about any experiences you've had where someone tried to make you do something sexual you didn't want to do, no matter who did it, how long ago it happened, or whether it was reported to police

18. Sometimes young people get hit, beat up or physically assaulted by another person. The person who hits, attacks or beats up a young person isn't always a stranger, but can be someone who the young person knows well, even a family member or friend. The person doing the hitting can be older than the young person, about the same age, or even younger than the young person. Young people tell us they sometimes get hit, attacked or beat up at school, in their neighborhood, or even at home. These types of attacks can even happen to small children sometimes. Many times, young people never tell anyone about these events.

In order to complete your family assessment, we would like to get the input of both adolescents and their parents. It is particularly important for us to find out what kinds of situations adolescents consider dangerous or risky, whether they have ever encountered these situations, what they know about how to avoid or handle these situations, and what kinds of prevention information they may have received at school or elsewhere.

We would like to interview your (AGE) about his/her knowledge, opinions and experiences as part of this study. The interview would take about half an hour, and can be scheduled at his/her convenience. All of his/her answers would be confidential and he/she doesn't have to answer any questions that he/she doesn't want to.

To thank your son/daughter for his/her assistance in this project, we will send him/her a check for five dollars.

[IF NECESSARY: We would also be happy to send you a letter before the interview, if you would like that.]

D15. I understand. But would you mind telling us why you don't wish us to interview him/her. That will help us better understand who is represented and not represented in the study.

That concludes this part of the study. As you can tell this survey deals with issues that are very important to women, and the results will help to set public policy for the future. To complete the survey with you, we need to speak with you again twice more over the next two years. Your continued participation is very important to the success of the study. All participants will receive $50 at the end of the research project.

The survey results will provide the government with realistic estimates of the extent and nature of women's needs for special health and social services. Please be assured that your answers will be held in strictest confidence. I can give you our toll free number so that you can verify the survey.

IF HESITANT: We would be happy to send you a letter explaining the study more fully.
